

Damage to the environment is the biggest problem facing the world

Once very complex and hard to solve problem in modern world is global damage to the environment. Many people don't even think about the fact that an exclusively consumerist and apathetic attitude to the nature can lead to the shortage of natural resources. It means that a person won't be able to provide food, water and all other necessities for life himself.

It is undeniable that people have become dependent on cars, phones and other luxuries. But our excessive love for manufactured metallic and plastic goods badly affects on the environment. Things like deforestation, overconsumption, overfishing and others are dramatically impacting our world. Human activity can be directly attributed to the causes of many extinctions of animals, water and air pollution. So, in my judgment, everyone should be awarded of the factors that contribute to such bad ecological state.

I consider that pollution is everywhere. From cigarettes and candy wrappers thrown in the woods to million of tons of pollution emitted into the atmosphere and ocean by factories and car exhaust. In the course of pollution and wastes are obviously inevitable.

Furthermore, one of the most difficult to decompose substances is plastic. In connection with this people should use biodegradable materials for packing manufactured products.

I also think that global warming the greatest cause of impact on environment. The largest of causes are burning fossil fuels and deforestation. In the connection with this everyone should follow a few recommendations to prevent global warming. For example, people can opt out of private car in favour of walking, cycling or using public transport. In addition to it people may use energy-saving bulbs as they consume less electricity.

Forest is one of the most essential ecosystem in the world. About 80% of animal and plant live there. In my opinion, deforestation is also of the biggest problem nowadays. Trees are one of the largest produces of oxygen, so it is obvious that deforestation had a bad affect on animals and people. To prevent this everyone should rationally and economically use the paper products

Our future depends on the state of the environment. It provides people everything they need for life.

I support movement and projects in which people take part in actions to preserve the wealth of our nature. They pick up rubbish, hold clean-ups, plant trees, equip reserves. Such people are an example for us, as they selfless care about preserving our world. Moreover, it would be great if ecology lessons were held in schools.

To sum up, I'd like to say that damage to the environment is the biggest problem in the world because people take more and more from the environment without thanks.

Nature should be protected, so that we can breath fresh air, drink and swim in the clean water. By changing the attitude towards the problem and becoming a little more attentive to people's habits, everyone can make a significant contribution to the preservation of nature
